Topic

Systemic Leadership and the Systems Thinking RoundTable.

Speaker

Dr. Sue Gabriele

Abstract

This webinar will take you a 30-minute transdisciplinary journey to “Systemic Leadership.” Systemic leadership enhances current best theory and practice with systems thinking. As a systems thinker, you can more confidently identify and use all the relevant information around you in your decision-making and action plans. On our journey, we will clarify material cause vs. human cause. Our evidence and examples will draw from general systems theory and relevant disciplines, including engineering, education, management, and psychology. In this session, you will also experience the Systems Thinking RoundTable, designed to allow everyone present equal turns to share their views, and hear the views of all others around this topic. The webinar will be of value to graduate students, engineers, teachers, managers, leaders, and anyone interested in being more effective, satisfied, and appreciated at work and in their daily lives.

Biography

Dr. Sue Gabriele is an innovator and consultant in systemic school and workplace renewal. After a twenty-year career as a high school teacher, she returned to graduate school seeking answers to the problems of large institutions. She studied at USC, UCLA, then Saybrook University, where she earned a PhD in Human Science: Social and Institutional Change. Sue found her theoretical solutions in systems theory, human agency, and control systems engineering. Her practical solution is a user-ready tool, the Systems Thinking RoundTable. Twice a year, Sue teaches an online class on "Systemic Leadership" through Ashland University.
